

How Cats got their

Claws

How Cats Got Their Claws

By Aidan

At the time the animals barely had anything, a gray cat named Mousey was defenseless and wanted something to protect him.

So, he was looking around and saw a tortoise shell. It was empty somehow. So, he went and tried it on, but it was too heavy and small.

He left, went to a field, and saw a komodo dragon. He asked, "How did you get your poison spit?"

But komodo said, "I don't know."

So Mousey left and saw an owl and asked, "How did you get your talons?"

But the owl ignored Mousey and flew away.

Then Mousey felt sad and saw a hole in the ground. He went in it and saw that a gopher was in it. He told it, "I need to get some defense." But the gopher didn't know.

Then Mousey went back to a place where his home was near. He was sort of lost. He was trying to climb on this weird giant couch. But, he couldn't and ran around in circles. He tripped on his tail and fell into his actual home. Mousey landed on a ball and decided to forget about the search. Mousey decided to help other animals.

So he grabbed onto an albatross for some reason going to Antarctica and helped some penguins get food. Mousey noticed a sharp thing on his paw and noticed it was some defense.

But it was only one, so he went back to his home and helped a sparrow by giving it some seeds to eat. He saw another claw thingy!

So he went to a nearby desert in Australia and helped Wimpy the cobra get poison. Then he had a dance party in Wimpy's house and Wimpy danced like a crazy snake. They had a nice talk, and Wimpy went and poisoned an anaconda and a python that teased him before slithered away in fear. Mousey saw another little claw thingamajig. He was happy and then he noticed only two more claws could fit on his paw.

Then saw a nice anaconda and asked what was wrong. It said, "I was startled by a thingy from the sky."

Mousey helped it feel better by giving it a mouse and got another claw thingy!

Then he met a dog. He saw that it was scared about not having food because the animal market thing in this small animal town was out of food supply. So many animals that don't hunt starved and died. But then Mousey went and got some mice and gave them to the market. He got some meat, wheat, and stuff and made some dog food. He gave it to the dog because he was hungry and then gave the rest to the dog food sellers and saw two more claw things!

He needed to help two more animals! "Yay" Mousey thought to himself. "Thank you" The dog said. Then he went and helped two Birds by giving them more food. Both of his paws had their claws on them! He was so happy.

Then Mousey sprinted back home and had a rave party with Wimpy the cobra. They were happy.

"The end I guess" Mousey said. "Nah," Wimpy said.

"Ok then well lets go do some stuff in the market place thingamajig but yea," Mousey said.

